

New drug to help dogs with Thunderstorm and Fireworks Anxiety

"Is your dog trying to tell you something? At least one-third of all dogs in the United States suffer from noise aversion. You may never have heard of noise aversion, but it's a real and serious medical condition that when left untreated, progresses to a more severe state. Noise aversion causes your dog to suffer from anxiety and fear during noise events - and creates a strain on the bond you and your family have with your beloved best friend.

Now we have the first and only FDA-approved treatment for noise aversion in dogs, Sileo, which is pronounced si-lehh-o. It is a unique and new gel medication developed specifically to treat the fear experienced by dogs during loud noises such as fireworks, thunder, construction work, street noise and traffic. It is clinically proven to be safe and effective without other treatments or training. It is a fast-acting and easy to administer at home treatment for noise aversion. You can use it as needed, for each noise event. It calms without sedating, which allows your dog to interact normally with the family. Now what he hears won't hurt him. Click on the links below to learn more about noise aversion and how to administer Sileo."

13 Common Signs of Noise Aversion in Dogs \(Video\) and How To Administer Sileo Correctly \(Video\)